	SORP reference

Para 1.20	RightPro continues to work with a number of families in identifying common issues they are experiencing with accessing education for their children, and bringing these to the attention of relevant local authorities, to raise awareness and seek to inform changes to professional practice. Over the past year, RightPro has continued to offer pro bono supervision to a counsellor who works with individual with neurodivergence. We also started work on our training project, to educate and inform on 'twice exceptional' (2E) presentations in Higher Education settings. This included designing the project and hiring a research assistant. The next year will see the completion of this project, with the initial training product trialled on a focus group, and then advertised to relevant institutions. There is also a longer term project to develop an more dynamic system for trainees to interact with the training materials according to their needs, with a view to widening the audience for this project.
