Annual Report

The International Christian Church Network (TICCN) has continued to operate actively throughout the year both within the United Kingdom and internationally. The Network remains committed to supporting churches, ministers, charities, volunteers, and community projects through spiritual oversight, training, humanitarian encouragement, and practical support.

A key principle of TICCN is that the churches, ministries, and fellowships associated with the Network remain independent entities responsible for their own governance, finances, safeguarding, and operational affairs. TICCN functions primarily as a voluntary apostolic and advisory network that offers encouragement, fellowship, ministerial training, leadership development, and spiritual support without exercising direct financial control over affiliated ministries.

Throughout the year, TICCN has continued to develop relationships with ministers, churches, and humanitarian initiatives across multiple nations. This has included support for pastoral development, ministry mentoring, leadership encouragement, interfaith dialogue, charitable outreach, and community-based projects.

One of the defining characteristics of TICCN has been its commitment to providing ministry training and support without imposing compulsory charges upon ministers, deacons, volunteers, or churches. This approach reflects the Christian principle expressed in Matthew 10:8:

“Freely you have received, freely give.”

As a result, much of the work undertaken by TICCN has been accomplished through voluntary service, sacrificial giving of time, and goodwill from ministers and supporters who believe in the Network's mission and vision.

The Network continues to benefit from significant voluntary contribution in terms of leadership hours, pastoral care, administration, community engagement, mentoring, media activity, prayer support, and charitable assistance. The value of these voluntary hours greatly exceeds the modest financial income reflected within the accounts and demonstrates the strong commitment of those involved with the ministry.

During the year, TICCN has also continued to support and encourage projects connected to:

- Community outreach
- Poverty relief initiatives
- Faith and community cohesion
- Ministerial mentoring and training
- International fellowship development
- Youth, education, and humanitarian engagement
- Volunteer-led church and community support activities

Although TICCN has historically chosen not to actively pursue significant fundraising, modest contributions from members and supporters during the year represent an encouraging improvement compared with previous years.

Looking toward the future, the Network recognises that some developing projects — particularly those connected with humanitarian aid, poverty relief, international outreach, and charitable community support — may eventually require a more structured approach to fundraising and financial development in order to expand their long-term effectiveness and sustainability.

TICCN remains committed to operating with integrity, accountability, and faithfulness to its Christian mission while seeking to serve communities both locally and internationally.

Yours faithfully,

Archbishop Steven L. Evans
