Annual Report and Accounts

30 April 2026

Purpose

The International Society of Economic Criminology (ISEC) was established with a clear mission: to lead the fight against economic crime through sharing the latest knowledge and research. The founding members recognised a critical gap with no existing organisation effectively uniting scholars from different academic disciplines and working professionals dedicated to combating the growing threat of economic crime.

With economic crime on the rise globally, ISEC is uniquely positioned to foster world-class research, networking opportunities and provide its members with exclusive access to vital knowledge through publications, events, and a comprehensive online repository.

Activity

The first Annual Conference of the International Society of Economic Criminology (ISEC) brought together researchers, practitioners, and policymakers to confront these pressing issues. Through cross-disciplinary dialogue and hands-on engagement, we explored emerging challenges, key threat factors, and what it takes to respond effectively in a shifting global landscape.

Delegates from 48 organisations across more than 20 countries, with several hundred registrations and strong in-person participation, joined the one-day programme of keynotes, interactive panels and research presentations under ISEC's motto, "Setting the Stage. Framing the Future. Fighting Economic Crime."

We are building ideological, conceptual, and organisational foundations of the economic criminology area, creating space for innovation, and turning knowledge into action.

The conference also introduced the mission and vision of ISEC, with opportunities to get involved and help shape the future of economic criminology.

During this formative stage membership to ISEC has remained free to allow members to gain access to exclusive information, nominate individuals for awards, and enjoy priority access to our blogs and events.

Future

ISEC has announced a suite of awards recognising academic excellence which will be made at the second ISEC Annual Conference in the coming year. These awards are designed to recognise excellence in research and scholarship in economic criminology.
