Structure, governance and management

Who we are

Palliative Transport Service is a voluntary organisation run by a small committee of five members, who give up their time in order to assist those diagnosed with cancer in the Fermanagh area to attend their out-patient appointments at various hospitals across Northern Ireland.

Objectives and activities

What we do

We engage with volunteer drivers, who have access to their own means of transport, to convey cancer patients to the various cancer centre across Northern Ireland in order to meet their out-patient appointments.

The benefits of our service

The benefits flowing from our activity of transporting patients to hospital alleviate the worry and stress incurred by the beneficiaries in making sure they are comfortably, safely and timely able to meet their medical appointments in the absence of reliable and suitable public transport available in the County Fermanagh area. The charity regularly receives oral feedback, letters and cards of thanks from the beneficiaries who avail of the service provided. Donations flow into the charity from members of the public and the beneficiaries and their families. There is no harm arising from any of the purposes. The beneficiaries are those patients suffering from cancer and their relatives and friends whom the beneficiaries may feel more comfortable traveling alongside than just the volunteer driver. There is no private benefit flowing from any of the purposes.

Achievements and performance

The Charity continues to receive support from its volunteer drivers and the goodwill of the patients and their families, as well as members of the general public, to allow this vital service to be performed for the foreseeable future.

Financial review

The Charity has a deficit in the year ended 31 August 2022 of £5,130. Overall the Charity has cash funds of £66,607 as at 31 August 2022 (31 August 2021: £71,737).
