

Trustees report for Origin Bible Trust.

For year 1/5/23 to 30/4/24.

During this period the exhibition was reprinted using a gift of funds supplied specifically for that purpose. This allowed for some minor corrections to be made and a redesign of the graphics in one main panel by moving the more advanced information unto stand-alone displays. This made it more consistent with the rest of the exhibition.

The exhibition was displayed in a number of schools by invitation, and when in public buildings, schools in the locality where invited to attend. There was a good response to this by controlled, maintained and integrated schools. Transport was arranged free of charge to the schools, the cost being covered by Christians in the area.

Children were conducted around the exhibition in age appropriate tours. These covered the history and some of the main themes of the Bible, how we got the Bible and its impact on the society in which we live. At other times the exhibition was open to the public and visitors were encouraged to browse it at their leisure, with the trustees on hand to answer questions.

Feedback from teachers was very positive, both in the content of the exhibition and how those explaining it to children were able to relate to each age group. It was also noted that the content of the exhibition fitted closely in with the national RE curriculum.

During this period the exhibition was displayed in a prison chapel when prisoners were able to view it and ask questions.

No charge was made for the exhibition and there were no collection boxes used or appeal for donations. The trust did not do any fund raising.

In addition to the above mentioned reprint, expenditure of the trust was for insurance, the design and printing publicity material, as well as rent for use of public venues. The trustees transported and operated the exhibition at their own expense.

No trustee received any remuneration or expenses from the trust.

The trustees are confident that the use of the Bible Exhibition has resulted in benefit to the public in providing education about the world's bestselling book and the joy and peace in coming to know Jesus Christ and His teaching. The trustees know of no harm resulting from the activities of the trust.
